

Justin Wong

Like: I don't know Justin well enough to have a lot of comments about him, but he has been active with the group so far so I think he will contribute to the group but is just a little quiet. Improve: I don't want to jump to conclusions about someone but Justin did come late for the first two meeting we've had and that isn't always the best sign. I would also hope

Justin speaks up more during our future meetings and share his thoughts.

Like: Contributes intelligent ideas to group discussion, seems to understand the key necessities of the project.

Improve: Tardy to both meetings, although his bike was stolen today, this cannot become a habit. Would like to hear more from him during group meetings as I believe he has good ideas and a clear vision of the project.

I like Justin's selective and intelligent contributions to meetings and his firm listening skills. I also like his neat writing which is necessary in the group. He does not feel the need to control the conversation until he has a great idea which I respect. His contributions to the group meetings are necessary and fruitful making him an excellent team member. Justin could improve his punctuality because he was late to both our scheduled meetings this week which is why he received the lowest score of the group.

Over the past week Justin did not complete any task off the SCRUM board because we haven't started our official sprint. Justin this past week was late to some of our meetings due to understandable reasons. We brought this issue up and he understands that it won't happen anymore. This week he helped come up with user stories for the SCRUM board and regularly posts on the group page such as meeting times. Overall Justins performance meets expectations.

Sean McGrath

I like that Sean was very thorough about his project idea as he even gave us a project proposal outlining his idea.

Like: I liked that Sean came up with a good idea for our project and was ambitious to use a web medium for the project even though we changed our plans, but that he brought up changing them and being okay with them was nice too. He also looks up and posts a lot to our facebook group.

Improve: Sean may be a little over confident about the time that we can finish some tasks, since we are using swift to code we are going to have to take more time to learn the language properly, so I will hope he is patient with the team.

I like Seans ability to take criticism and adapt his ideas to the rest of the group. Sean had a great idea that everyone was on board with but in the next meeting when we had found out about a similar product he was more than willing to adopt a new idea. He is a skilled communicator, motivated to do work, and above all remarkably intelligent. He is invaluable to the group. I do not believe there are any areas in which he needs to improve.

Over the past week Sean didn't complete any tasks off the SCRUM board because we haven't started our official sprint. Sean this week helped pitch ideas for our user stories. He also pitched ideas as to what project we should do. He is also very attentive and posted times when he was available to meet for SCRUM meetings. Overall his performance meets expectations.

Christina Duran

I liked that Christina came up with a creative project idea.

Like: Christina's huge contribution this week was her idea which we have chosen to do as our project. She has also been very easy to work with so far, wanting to contribute to group work and is interested in everyone's ideas.

Improve: I would like Christina to be more vocal during group meetings, she tends to comment on others ideas, and I think it would be beneficial to hear more from her to begin with, especially since we are doing her project idea.

I like Christinas ability to not interrupt people when they are talking. She allows others to control the floor, but when she chooses to speak it is always an intelligent contribution. Her work ethic is unparalleled by anyone in the group having kept up with all class readings. She is an exceptional team member and does not have any areas in which she needs to improve.

Over the past week Christina did not complete any tasks off the SCRUM board because we haven't started the official sprint . Christina though has contributed by assuming role of product owner because she pitched the idea of the project we will work on this quarter. Christina helped come up with user stories for our MOSCOW table. She is also very attentive to the group posts regarding meeting times. Christina is helping writing the draft release plan. Overall I would say Christina's performance meets all expectations.

Daniel Urrutia

I like that Daniel is eager to continue progressing our ideas.

Like: Daniel always reply's to people from the team and took the task of being one of the first scrum masters when asked. Daniel is also helpful during meetings

Improve: Although Daniel's not as quiet as Justin he seems to be a little shy to speak up, but I think he tries. Also, Daniel may be a scrum master but I'm unsure if he will take control like a scrum master should since he is a double scrum master with Timur.

Like: Voices his opinions to contribute to meetings and is genuinely motivated to help make our project a success.

Improve: Vision of the product or a specific functionality does not always seem to align with other group members, needs ask for clarification to ensure we are all on the same page before we move on.

I like Danny's work ethic which shows in him always willing to work! Danny took time this week to try learn Android before our group was certain about the project, that reflects Dannys provident attitude. I feel like I can come to him with anything at anytime and he will assist if necessary for the team. In addition he has great ideas which stem from his firm technical knowledge. I do not believe Danny has any areas in which he needs to improve.

Timur Mertogul

I like that Tim has no problem expressing his ideas.

Like: Timur was the first person to start giving original ideas for projects and got the group to ask the teacher her opinion of our project ideas, and he has been a good scrum master so far.

Improve: Since Timur is one of the scrum masters this sprint, I don't think Timur is unorganized but he has a lot on his plate so it will be harder to stay organized, so he should be careful when it comes to due dates and other portions of the project.

Like: Tim is incredibly enthusiastic and has a real vision of what we can achieve as a group both in Sprint 1 and over the quarter as a whole. He seems to take a leadership role during meetings, which helps drive discussion along and is appropriate for his role as Scrum Master.

Improve: So far I have not noticed anything I would ask him to improve upon.

I like Tim's innovative thoughts. He is a creative and intelligent thinker which shows in our meetings. Tim is not afraid to challenge ideas for the welfare of the final product which I appreciate. He is a huge asset to the team, I do not believe there are any areas in which he needs to improve.

Over the past week Tim did not complete any tasks off the SCRUM board because our sprint hasn't officially started. Tim helped organize the SCRUM board this week with user stories and organize the burnup chart. Tim has been consistent on posting resources and times when he is available to work together. He has also participated in the group page this week mentioning the times he is available. Overall I would say Tim has met all expectations in terms of performance.

Jake Zidow

I like that Jake tried to encourage everyone to express their thoughts.

Like: Jake is very outgoing and organized the group by making a GitHub repository, facebook group, and exchanging contact information with everyone.

Improve: I am afraid Jake will take control as if he were a scrum master because he's so outgoing which will be fine when it's his turn but it's not his responsibility right now.

Like: Incredibly enthusiastic, helps guide group meetings, readily contributes his own ideas and also maintaining a genuine interest in those of others. So far he has been very reliable and seems to hold others to the same standard as himself.

Improve: So far I have not noticed anything I would ask him to improve upon.

Over the past week or day, Jake hasn't completed any tasks off the SCRUM board because our official sprint hasn't started yet. However Jake has helped organize the SCRUM board by establishing the MoSCoW board along with Tim. Jake has contacted the group this week to figure out possible slot times we can all meet up for our SCRUM meetings. Overall Jake's performance meets expectations.
